SHARP FREE ONCE MORE

RELEASED ON $40,000 BAIL FURNISHED BY TWO SECURITIES.

The Old Man Outside Ludlow Street Jail Dencon Richardson While Awalting Release-To Remain at His Home Here Until Strong Enough to Go to His Farm.

Jacob Sharp breathes the air of freedom to-day. He was admitted to bail in $40,000 by Justice Barrett at noon. At 10.10 o'clock this morning Deputy Sheriff Kaufman went to Ludlow Street Jail and served upon Warden J. P. Keating an order from Sheriff Grant, signed by Under Sheriff J. B. Sexton, which read: "Take Jacob Sharp to the Supreme Court, Chambers, at 10.30 o'clock."

Sharp had passed the night in restlessness as usual, and had but just turned away from his frugal breakfast. He had not shown the slightest interest in his case, except that he was more wakeful yesterday, and this morning he seemed expectant at times.

Warden Keating went to Sharp's room and Warden Keating went to Sharp's room and told him of the order and that he must prepare to move. Mrs. Sharp, the faithful slave of the old man, dressed him with more enthusiasm than at any time these five months, and with a cane in either hand Mr. Sharp essayed to leave his room. It was found that he needed help and Warden Keating, whose sympathy has been touched by the feeble condition of his prisoner, supported him on one side and Deputy Sheriff Kaufman on the other, down the jail steps and to a carriage which was in waiting. Sharp wore a suit of sheep's gray, much faded and almost threadbare. Over this was a rich chinchilla overcoat, and on his shoulders was thrown a seal-brown travelling shawl, bordered with a red and gray stripe. shawl, bordered with a red and gray stripe. A silk hat with a deep black band completed his dress.

His progress to the carriage was a pitiful sight, for it was evident that he was too feeble to sustain himself. George Sharp, his grandson, put in an appearance at this moment and took a sent on the box. He was the ment and took a seat on the box. He was the custodian of a value containing necessaries to be used in case Mr. Sharp was taken suddenly ill. Mrs. Sharp brought this out to her grandson. This was the first time Sharp had been out of the jail since his sentence on July 14 last.

The carriage was driven rapidly to the Court-House which Tweed's men made to cost the city nearly $15,000,000, and then the old man was half carried into the office of Sheriff Grant. He was given a seat in Mr. Sexton's room, and found there his other grandson, who is manager of his farm at Rome.

Sharp was very much exhausted, and his face wore the flush of excitement. Deacon Richardson was there to offer himself as a bondsman for Sharp, and the two old men chatted together pleasantly. Sharp grew interested, actually smiled and his eyes brightened somewhat.

To look at Sharp as he sat in his chair, one would not think of him as a sick man. He is an old man to be sure, but he looks like a hale and hearty old man.

While all this was going on, Sharp's indefatigable counsel, Congressman W. Bourke Cockran, was at the office of District-Attorney Martine. He was accompanied by John H. Selines, Sharp's son-in-law, J. H. McLean, Secretary of the Twenty-third Street Railway, who was a witness in Sharp's trial, Lawyer William Hildredth Field, George

amount, each becoming responsible in the sum of $20,000.

After Messrs. Shepherd and Hendrix had signed the bond Sharp was asked to affix his signature. He could not sit at a desk, and it was necessary that a board should be placed upon the old man's knees. Peter Mitchell and Sharp's grandson each held an end of the board. Sharp tried, but it was a great effort. He bent down his head, took hold of the ben with nervous hand, and began to

At 12.07 o'clock Jacob Sharp was taken before Justice Barrett and formally discharged. He was carried down stairs, placed in the carriage again and driven to his home in West Twenty-third street, where Mrs. Sharp awaited him, for she went to their home immediately after her husband left Ludlow Street Jail.

Dolayed by Insufficient Steam.

There was considerable delay on the Sixth Avenon. Six uptown trains passed Twenty-eighth street station before a train, crowded to the uthous, took off some of the people waiting on the downtown station. Passengers were load in debunciation of the company. One old gentleman remarked that they let the steam freeze or economy's sake. The fact was that the engine of a downtown train did not have enough steam to ret further than Fifty-third street from the Fifty-eighth street termins. When it came to a stop it blocked the trains coming from Harlem and thus caused the delay. HOME AND CHATTELS BURNED.

One Child's Life Lost in an Early Morning

Fire was discovered in the five-story brick tenement-house 345 West Forty-third street shortly before 5 o'clock this morning, and in the panic that followed little Joseph Jacobs, the five-year-old son of Abraham Jacobs, was burned to death.

burned to death.

The house is a double building and contained about ten families. Samuel Simmons, his wife and three children occupied the first floor, west, and it was in his rooms that the fire started. The strong wind carried the sparks through the elevator shaftway, igniting the tinder-like landings, and in less than it en minutes the house from cellar to roof was beyond the help of the Fire Department.

What caused the fire no one knows definitely.

Mrs. John Fleury, who lives on the second floor, directly over the Simmons', says that she was awakened about 4.45 o'clock by an explosion, and in less than five minutes smoke began to pur into her rooms. Her husband rushed into the hallway, but was driven back by flames.

A second attempt was unsuccessful, and helping his wife and family through the harrow passageway, with nothing on, save their night-clothes, he rushed to the nearest box and gave the alarm.

In short order the firemen were on hand. In the mean time Mr. Fleury and a policeman had awakened the inmates, who, terror-stricken and almost naked, clambered down the fire-escapes in the rear.

Some in their fright rushed to the roof and ran across to neighboring houses, while others in their haste to escape the flames jumped from second-story windows, fortunately escaping unharmed.

Abraham Jacobs occupied apartments on the third floor, west, and he was awakened by the confusion and smoke. He awoke his wife and five children, and without making any attempt to save personal effects started downstairs.

Little Joe Jacobs, the youngest child, was terrified, and in the excitement was left behind. His father and mother each thought the other had care of the little fellow. In the confusion they were separated, and when at last they met and inquired for the children it was found poor Joe was missing.

An immediate search was made and his charred remains were found in the wreck in the little bedroom. The parents became almost distracted with grief.

Nothing in the nature of personal effects was saved, and as few, if any, of the families were insured, they literally lose their homes and clothing.

SPECULATION TAME AND MANY BUYERS HOLDING OFF.

Speculation was tame in all the Wall street markets. There was a dearth of news calculated to influence prices either one way or the other and even the rumor mill was comparatively idle. Operators are simply backing and filling, preferring to keep their dealings within restricted limits rather than to spread themselves out at a time of the year when the financial situation is fraught with more or less uncertainty. The halting disposition favors the bears, who are selling the list in a quiet way, and evidently expect tight money or some other unfavoraciel circumstance to help them later on in gathering in their shorts at a profit.

The first movement of prices this morning was upward, the advance having ranged from \(\frac{1}{2} \) to \(\frac{1}{2} \) per cent, but subsequently there was a decline of \(\frac{1}{2} \) to 1\(\frac{1}{2} \) per cent, in the active shares. One disappointment met with by the bulls was the announcement from Washington that the Pacific Railway Investigating Committee had struck a snag and would not render a report favorable to the Union Pacific after all.

A good many Wall street people have been loading up with Union Pacific on the recent talk that the report would be a good one, and their disappointment knows no bounds.

She refused at first, but finally did tell him. He jumped up and acted like a crazy person. He wanted to go out, and she tried to persuade him not to go. He went, however, saying he would come back in fifteen minutes. He did not return until 4 o'clock in the morning. He laid down, could not sleep, and went out again. The next time she saw him was in Raymond Street Jail.

On cross-examination, Mr. Ridgway called Detective Holland, and asked Mrs. Weidler if she ever saw him before. She remembered having had a talk with him, but denied emphatically that she had ever said to him that Dr. Duggan had never attempted to take liberties with her, although she did say that she and her husband had never had any trouble with the Doctor.

Dr. Duggan had attended her at the birth of two of her children and one other occasion and had never before insulted her. Her husband was sober and apparently all right until she told him what had happened.

Boston, Dec. 1.—Last evening a happy family might have been seen on the platform of the New Bedford depot surrounded by their friends wishing them God-speed on their long journey to their na-tive land, Ireland. The family consisted of Pat-rick Driscoll, his wife and a three-mouths-old

Arriving in Boston, Patrick had his family and baggage quickly transferred to the Cunard steamship Cephalona, which was to sell this morning at 10 o'clock. All went well with the passengers from New Bodford, the final adleus had been said, the heavy hawser had been thrown off and the good ship was gliding out of her dock, when the doctor of the vessel was seen to come to the rain and call to General Agent Martin that a man had been minutes, tug was immediately sent alongside, but be-e it arrived the head of the family from New

A tig was immediately sent alongaise, out be-fore it arrived the hear of the family from New Bedford had taken his last journey.

The body was low-red into the tug, followed by the wife with the baby in her arms, and brought back to the dock. Here the scene was heartrend-ing. The poor mother would repeatedly throw herself on the body of her husband and sob aloud, until she was gently led away by sympathetic strangers.

that she was genty led away by sympathetic strangers.

The poor woman is left destitute, without money or clothes, everything that she possessed in this world now being on its way to England.

Driscoll was a rustic chairmaker and about thirty years of age. He has been in poor health for some time and was taking the trip by the advice of his decrea.

Four Bullets Fired By An Infuriated Tenmster in Kaness Into An Aged Colored Laborer—The Murderer Caught After a Pursuit on Horseback—Lynch Law Feared from the Dend Man's Companions.

WYANDOTTE, Kan., Dec. 1.—The most brutal murder [that ever took place in this city occurred this morning, and may be followed by lynching. Harrison Tutts, an aged colored laborer, was shot four times in cold blood by E. E. Weldon, a desperate character, engaged in driving a team in the same gang, and died almost immediately. Tutts was fifty years of age, and the father of nine children. A dispute arose over a trifling matter and Weldon comnenced abusing Tutts, who retorted.

Weldon dropped the lines of his team, rushed to a tent 200 feet away, opened his trunk and ran back towards Tutts armed with a big pistol. Tutts tried to hide behind his team, but the murderer followed, firing four shots from a 44-calibre revolver in rapid succession into the body of the fleeing man, who dropped to the earth, gasped and died. At the second shot Tutts fell on his knees and imploringly held up his hands. Weldon placed the revolver against his head and fired twice. Then Weldon turned and fled across the State line. Officers started on horseback in pursuit at once' and at 11 o'clock Weldon was arrested and locked up. Hundreds of negroes from both sides of the

SEXTON LORD MAYOR OF DUBLIN. Unanimously Elected at a Meeting of the Corporation This Afternoon [SPECIAL CABLE TO THE WORLD.]

London, Dec. 1 .- At a meeting of the Con poration to-day Lord Mayor Sullivan stated that his name had been omitted in the commission which is to open the Assizes to-morrow. He believed the omission to be illegal and he intended to accompany the Judges to Court.

Mr. Sexton, High Sheriff of Dublin, m would also accompany the Judges and if Mr. Sullivan was refused a seat on the bench he (Sullivan) would leave the court and decline to recognise the Court's authority.

Mr. Sexton was unanimously elected Lord
Mayor to succeed Mr. Sullivan. In a speech thanking the corporation for the honor con-ferred upon him, he said that every day developed new attacks upon the lives and lib-erties of the Irish people. The Lord Mayor ought to be the unflinching organ of prevalent public opinion.
